Ambulance response times to be reviewed

By Diana E. Lundin

Upland officials say they want to discuss improving response times before they allow an ambulance firm to raise its fees.

City officials have asked representatives from Mercy Ambulance Co. to attend a meeting Monday to see what can be done to improve those times before approving a 2½ percent raise.

Under a city ordinance, Mercy — with an exclusive right to serve the West Valley — must arrive at an emergency medical scene within eight minutes of being dispatched, said Fire Chief Gary Edwards.

The Fire Department's records show that while Mercy indeed averaged 7.62 minutes for 1,747 calls — including 1,060 emergency calls — in the city's last fiscal year, it also had 165 calls greater than an 11-minute response time.

And Edwards would like to see that record improved.

Mercy officials, however, deny the company has a substandard response time and contend the problem is actually one of differing methods of record keeping.

Homer Aerts, director of the Fontana-based company, said, "We don't even agree with that."

Aerts said Mercy statistics revealed that ambulances made 1,361 emergency calls to Upland in the same time period — July 1, 1986, to June 30, 1987 — and averaged a response time of 6.11 minutes.

"That's almost two minutes below what the ordinance requires," Aerts said.

Of the 1,361 calls, 86 had a response time of more than 10 minutes, he said.

"We're substantially within compliance of the ordinance of

Upland getting tough on those with lead feet

The Daily Report

Motorists with lead feet may want to think twice about speeding through Upland.

The city is looking at "a more scientific approach to traffic enforcement," said Police Chief Coy Estes.

And more scientific means more radar.

Upland has had hand-held radar guns since at least 1979, Estes said.

For this fiscal year, the City Council approved three replacement guns and three additional moving radar units to be mounted on the Police Department's three motorcycles for a total cost of about $5,000.

"Radar," Estes said, "is much more fair. It's more objective than subjective. In my opinion, it's more fair than having an officer pace the vehicle."

Also on the enforcement front, Estes said a position for a traffic agent has been established — a post the city has been unable to maintain for 1½ years because of a personnel shortage.

All of this extra attention comes to Upland as it looks for a way to solve its mounting traffic problem — and the accidents that inevitably result when motorists break the law.

"This continuation of an increase in traffic accidents is directly related to excessive speed," Estes said. "We have to address the problem."

In 1985, the city was the scene of 1,079 accidents while the numbers leaped to 1,243 the next year.

At the pace already set, Estes expects Upland to be the scene of some 1,400 accidents this year, from fender-benders to major wrecks.

"The dollar loss in traffic accidents is greater than all crimes put together — $5 or $6 million was lost in this city in traffic accidents in 1986," he said.

As part of the scientific approach, Estes said the traffic agent will pinpoint on computer the city's most hazardous intersections — for selective enforcement.

That program awaits the finalizing of an agreement with Precom, the joint powers agency of Ontario and Chino Police departments, for the use of its computer.

"We're doing that now manually but it's not as scientific," Estes said.

Upland's traffic agent, who has been at the job since July 6, is ranked the equivalent of a detective and is called to all serious accidents where prosecution is likely or a fatality occurs.

By bolstering enforcement, police officers hope they won't be spending as much time at accident scenes.

YOUR BENEFITS UNDER WORKER'S COMPENSATION

Thomas W. Moga,
Attorney At Law
(Board Certified Specialist)

OVERLOOKED INJURIES

Workers Compensation is a no fault insurance. The injury can be your fault and you can still recover. Let me give you some examples: An automobile accident where you are at fault. You cannot sue the other person because the accident was your fault; but if you are working at the time of injury, you can still recover under your employer's Worker's Compensation policy. The following people should be aware of this:

1. Truck Drivers
2. Delivery Drivers
3. Those people on errands for their employer who are involved in an accident
4. Salesmen
5. Bus and Taxi Drivers
6. Anyone injured while they are working and driving an automobile. Real estate salesmen have been found to be employees even though they are working on commission. Newspaper delivery boys are also employees and if injured while on their route, they are covered under Worker's Compensation. There may be two sources of recovery if you are not at fault. 1. You can recover under Workers' Compensation and also sue the responsible party for Personal Injuries. Generally, a Personal Injury lawsuit is worth more than what you can recover under Worker's Compensation, but nevertheless both avenues should be pursued.

REMEMBER,
IF YOU ARE WORKING
AND INJURED IN AN AUTO ACCIDENT,
EVEN THOUGH THE ACCIDENT
MAY BE YOUR FAULT, YOU CAN STILL RECOVER UNDER WORKERS COMPENSATION.

West Valley drivers are not buckling up

By Mike Krapf

West Valley drivers aren't buckling up their children nor themselves, according to a California Highway Patrol study.

In the San Bernardino area, infant safety seats are used by 39.5 percent of the area's parents, according to the study.

That compares with a safety-seat usage rate of 77.6 percent in San Francisco and 74.2 percent in Los Angeles.

Kent Milton, the commander of public affairs in the CHP's Sacramento office, said the rates would be nearly identical for overall seat belt usage.

The study, done by observing drivers in all parts of the state, indicates drivers in rural areas ignore their seat belts, Milton said.

"People seem to think the only time they need their seat belts is when they get on the big-city freeways," Milton said.

"But it's the opposite that's true," he said. "The freeway is the safest driving environment."

"Driving to the corner store is more dangerous than driving on the freeway," he said. "People need to start buckling up in less-urban areas like San Bernardino."

In Ontario, the CHP's public affairs officer reacted to the study by saying the patrol needs to work even harder to let people know that belts and safety seats save lives.

Officer Vivian Firlein said, "We've been trying our best to get the word (about seat belts) out," she said. "But nonetheless the number of people who use them here isn't high."

"Which is puzzling," she said. "Because there's no doubt that seat belts and safety seats work."

They are also the law.

In California, all passengers — in front and back seats — are required to use seat belts.

Infants less than 4 years old or 40 pounds must be strapped into safety seats.

After reciting the law, Firlein recalled several accidents where belts have saved West Valley residents.

According to the CHP's study, only drivers in Bakersfield and Salinas show greater disdain for seat belts than do San Bernardino-area drivers.

Upland eyes higher city service fees

By Diana E. Lundin

Higher fees for city services — to recoup their true costs — was the goal of the Upland City Council at a study session recently.

But council members wrestled with which services could be charged at 100 percent of their costs and which services would have to be subsidized by tax dollars.

"You and I as council people are going to be asked, 'Why in the devil should we pay for this? We're taxpayers.' That's what you'll be confronted with," said Mayor Richard Anderson.

The council agreed that each member would look at the 121 services listed in a consultant's report to decide if the fee should be raised.

"These are across-the-board fees for services," Anderson said. "It will touch everyone in the community."

While it may be permissible to let developers absorb their full costs for, say, planning services, the council hesitated levying true fees on softball players for use of city fields.

Anderson told his colleagues that Upland couldn't find itself in the position of creating a cost that prohibits "certain members of society from using the service."

Affected most directly by community input, the council agreed, would be the recreation department even though the monetary impact would be less than other services.

A report submitted to the council in June by Management Services Institute recommended the city adopt a business approach to services by charging true costs.

The study found $6 million of Upland's tax dollars are subsidizing services that benefit only a small portion of the general tax-paying public.

Only public safety, park and street maintenance and libraries should be paid for with tax money, the report said.
